Задание 3. Literature Studies (Part 3)

Questions 12-16 are based on the following task.

Look at the descriptions of book characters that have become part of world heritage. Write down the full names of THESE CHARACTERS, THE BOOKS AND THEIR AUTHORS paying attention to original spelling.

NOTE: The characters' gender is not specified, so the descriptions contain the pronouns "they – their – them" etc.

12.	This character became an orphan at a very early age and had to stay at their relatives' place where everyone hated and bullied them. Having to protect himself/herself, this person once became so violent that their guardian sent them to a

	low-cost school for the poor. In spite of numerous hardships, such as famine, typhoid and humiliation of the mean supervisor, this character managed to survive and later on found the job of a governor/governess in a respectable family. This person was very strong-willed, passionate and opinionated.
13.	This person is always associated with the change. Born in an aristocratic family, this person was often referred to as "the black sheep" because of their behaviour and views. During a turbulent period in the history of their country, this character watched their civilization disappearing, easily adjusted themselves to the new reality and managed to make a fortune. This character is also often recalled due to their stormy and passionate relationship with an equally free-spirited and seemingly unscrupulous socialite. A family tragedy made this character split up with their beloved.

14.	This character lived in the cruel world where children could starve and women had to sell themselves to feed their babies. The character was sent to prison after committing a minor crime that might have saved their little nephews from starvation. After nineteen years of imprisonment he/she managed to escape and became a new person who was determined to make a difference. This character once saved a fallen woman and her little girl whom he/she adopted after the mother's death. Throughout the whole life, this person was followed by a detective obsessed with the idea of justice.
15.	This person was a socialite who lived in a luxurious mansion in the richest part of New York, threw gorgeous parties and waited for their beloved to come to them. People often wondered where the money had come from as the person had appeared as if out of nowhere. It is sad that the beloved turned up in their life only to destroy it.
16.	This character was lucky to have been born in one of the wealthiest families of the country's ruling class, which gave them a feeling of superiority to those who were less refined and more provincial. Oddly enough, though very reserved and even arrogant, this book character fell passionately in love with an extremely witty person of a much lower social status whose family disgraced itself on several occasions. Typ 3 (Logical Thinking, Reading and Writing)

9-11 КЛАССЫ

This part of the test is based on three detective stories. For questions 17-19, solve the crimes and write a short explanation (2-3 sentences).

17.

“It was the butler who found my father on the floor of the study, Mr Holmes.” Emma Porter was a pleasant-seeming woman in her late twenties, her face heavily scored with grief. “He actually stumbled over the body in the darkness. The fire had gone out, you see. His shrieks woke the maid and myself up.”

“Did you have any reason to suspect your father was in danger?” Holmes kept his voice politely neutral in tone.

“No, of course not. I mean, he had to lay a fellow off yesterday, and he had a rival or two, but who would stoop to brutal murder over chauffeuring?” Her eyes welled with tears.

“Why did he sack that chap?”

“Drinking,” she said. “At least, that’s what I understood.”

Holmes frowned slightly. “Did he ever drive clients around himself?”

“Almost never, but perhaps if he was desperately short-staffed he might have. He generally kept himself distant from the drivers.”

“I see,” Holmes said. “And he was found dead shortly after midnight.”

“That’s right,” she said. “The butler was on his way to bed, but noticed that father was on the floor as he passed the study. I had been asleep for some hours by that point. The maid would have been in bed by eleven, too. All the windows were closed, of course. The police said that he’d been stabbed repeatedly. It just doesn’t make sense.” She folded inward on herself gently.

“I’m confident we’ll find the answers very soon,” Holmes said. “We already have our primary suspect.”

Who does Holmes suspect, and why?

Colin White’s murder came as a nasty shock to the London chess-playing community, particularly when police let it be known that they suspected that a fellow player had done that. Brian Campbell was one of three men who’d visited White that last day, according to a diary entry from that morning. A fellow player of some repute, he’d often been quite critical of White’s eccentricities. In addition to Campbell, another chess-player had paid White a visit, a younger man named Tom Wilton, who was said to rather look up to the deceased. Finally, he’d also had a visit from his cousin, Alan Lloyd, a genial chap with a devout love of fishing. Unfortunately, White had listed the men in alphabetical order, rather than time.

Inspector Lestrade was somewhat beside himself, because, following legal advice, none of the men was prepared to make any sort of statement whatsoever. Holmes agreed to help, and a few hours later, he and I were in the dead man’s flat.

“We’ve kept it as it was,” Lestrade said. “We found him in the sitting room, stabbed.”

The room was large and restrained. The big central table held four chess boards, one of them set up with a match in the mid-game. I am no chess expert, but I could tell White was winning handily, dominating the board with a line of major pieces, its bishops immediately either side of a rook.

Aside from that, there were small pieces of Greek statuary, a long shelf of books and a plain ashtray. I considered that perhaps a game had gone badly astray. Holmes poked around, examined a couple of books, and then turned to Lestrade.

“The identity of the murderer is blindingly obvious,” he said.

I didn’t know what he meant at the time. Do you?

19.

Once Mr Sherlock Holmes and I found ourselves in a luxurious room on the third floor of a hotel on the Strand.

We were preparing to leave the room when events overtook us. There was a shriek from Room 304, and then a woman’s voice shouting “No, Hugo! Don’t shoot! No!” This was followed by a loud gunshot.

We immediately made a dash for 304. The door was unlocked, and we burst in. I’m not ashamed to say that I had my revolver in my hand. Inside, we found a grim scene. The highwayman’s daughter lay dead on the floor. At the far end of the room clustered three people, all white-faced, in clear shock. The gun lay at their feet, where it had clearly been dropped by nerveless hands.

Holmes took one look at the group, and said, “Obviously a teacher, a tailor and a lawyer,” indicating each in turn. “Watson, restrain the...”

“Lawyer,” I said, seizing the unique chance to stick my oar in.

“Clearly,” Holmes said, with just the faintest hint of irritation.

But how did I of all people know which was the guilty party?

Задание 2. Stylistics (Part 2)

This part of the test is devoted to stylistic devices. As you might have understood from the previous task, stylistics can be of great importance in various forms of art as well as in our everyday life. Stylistic devices used in poetry and literature, cinema and theatre do help to convey a certain message. What about pop music? For questions 31- 41, listen to the well-known song "Are you lonesome tonight?" by Elvis Presley and read its lyrics below. Think what stylistic devices are used in the highlighted phrases. Complete the table giving the name of the stylistic devices.

NOTE: Some phrases are highlighted several times because they are THE SAME STYLISTIC DEVICE.

The official video is at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9XVdtX7uSnk> .

(31) Are you lonesome tonight?

Do you miss me tonight?

Are you sorry we (32) drifted apart?

(33) Does your memory stray to a brighter sunny day

When I kissed you and called you sweetheart?

Do the chairs in your parlor seem (34) empty and bare?

Do you gaze at your doorstep and picture me there?

Is your heart filled with pain, shall I come back again?

Tell me dear, (31) are you lonesome tonight?

I wonder if (31) you are lonesome tonight

You know (35) someone said that the world's a stage

And each must play a part

(36) Fate had me playing in love with you as my sweet heart

(37) Act one was when we met, I loved you at first glance

You (38) read your line so cleverly and never missed a cue

Then (37) came act two, you seemed to change and you acted strange

And why I'll never know

Honey, you lied when you said you loved me

And I had no cause to doubt you

But I'd rather go on hearing your lies

Than go on living without you

Now (39) the stage is bare and I'm standing there

With (40) emptiness all around

And if you won't come back to me

Then they can (41) bring the curtain down

Is your heart filled with pain, shall I come back again?

Tell me dear, (31) are you lonesome tonight?
